Populism in Latin America - Wikipedia

The golden era for Latin American populism is usually cited as the 1930s to the 1960s and identified with such preeminent populists as L á zaro C á rdenas (1934 – 1940) in Mexico, V í ctor Ra ú l Haya de la Torre in Peru (though never president), and Juan and Eva "Evita" Per ó n in Argentina (1946 – 1955). If populism had a transformative impact on the region's politics, it was assumed that the series of military dictatorships beginning in the 1960s ended the populist phase.
